

Programme Specific Outcome-Political Science Honours

The journey of Political Science as an academic discipline has begun since the late nineteenth century.

- Political Science, the mother discipline, consists of the sub-disciplines like Public Administration, Public Policy, Development Administration, Political Thought (Western & Indian), Political Theory, Comparative Politics, International Relations etc.
- The discipline seeks to disseminate knowledge on the subjects like state, government, constitution, power, political institutions, political organizations, political structure, political process, political parties, human rights, political behaviour, political culture, political obligation, political opinion and political economy etc.
- The discipline enables the students and the scholars of the subject to learn about the Constitutional norms, values, the fundamental rights, duties. In other words, the subject contributes in making obedient and politically conscious citizens who are well aware of their rights and duties.
- Career wise the subject has its own value in the society. The subject has the potentiality of opening many career opportunities and options before the students and scholars who pursue Bachelor and the higher degrees in the subject. For instance after obtaining a degree one can go into the field of teaching, research, civil service, law, management, marketing, journalism and public relations etc.